
THE MARKET OUTLOOK:

End-of-Week Bulls ‘n’ Bears

Analysts’ and Indicators’ Trend Views for the Coming Week

Listed below is a dashboard of “short-term” bullish or bearish sentiments and indicator signals from a selected variety of free online resources: advisors, bloggers, brokerages, and software programs/automated signal generators.

Their end-of-week pronouncements (made Friday or on the weekend or Monday) for the general market is recorded here as Bullish or Bearish, indicating their view that the general US market will go up or down in the near-term.

The following week’s S&P 500 performance gauges whether their pronouncements were correct or wrong, counting the cumulative five days following their end-of-week pronouncements.

Why I have created this resource. There are a number of ways to invest: using short-term, medium-term, and long-term approaches—day-trading, swing trading, buy and hold. I am always looking for the simplest, least-complicated way to invest, while at the same time ensuring that it is a powerful and effective way to make money. (At the outset, let me say that my bias and philosophical bent here is from the perspective of market timing based on technical indicators and trends, and not fundamentals, and using index ETFs as opposed to individual stocks.) One such approach I am exploring here is to simply assess the market at the end of the week, then make a decision based on that assessment for the next week’s trading position. Here I am looking at some of the best trading minds, culling their freely-available insights into the market, and tabulating it here on a weekly basis. I am inviting you to explore with me this inquiry into what some of the best minds are thinking about the market in terms of being bullish or bearish, and then using their wisdom to make our own decisions.
